Coating serves a number of purposes:

- Protects the tablet (or the capsule contents) from stomach acids
- Protects the stomach lining from aggressive drugs such as enteric coated aspirin
- Provides a delayed release of the medication
- Helps maintain the shape of the tablet
- To protect the tablet from moisture and other adverse conditions.
- To lubricate the tablet to ease swallowing.
- To disguise unpleasant tastes.
- To create a barrier between the active ingredient and the gastrointestinal tract.
- To control the release of drug into the body.
